CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ADOPTS NEW METHOD OF SECURING HOTEL HERE

Engages Man in That Business to Report if and What Kind of Hotel is Needed—He Says Former Estimate Was $150,000 Too High—Will Return Deposits Made Under Old Plan.

William A. Hart, who has just finished a very successful campaign for the financing of a new hotel in Schenectady, has been engaged to make a complete investigation of the hotel needs and possibilities in Kingston, with a view to the building of a hotel that can be operated on a business basis, should he find that conditions justify it. This action was taken at what had been intended to be a joint meeting of the Van Winkle Hotel directors and the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, held at the Stuyvesant on Thursday evening. With the exception of Judge Fowler and Herbert Carl no directors of the Van Winkle Hotel appeared, and Judge Fowler attended only the preliminary dinner, leaving before the business of the evening was taken up.

In view of the failure of the Van Winkle Hotel Co. to accomplish anything, it was decided to return to stock subscribers all payments made to the Chamber of Commerce committee. The checks, with four per cent interest, will be sent out immediately after July 1.

Mr. Hart was introduced and gave a talk on the building and management of hotels in which he set forth the word for careful and expert preliminary inquiry and estimates before any decision was reached. The opinions of sidewalk enthusiasts and of those who have no knowledge, other than that gained by occasionally pa-

Mrs. Lonergan testified how, for thirty years, she had suffered beatings and abuse from her husband, and recited a story of a life of poverty. The shooting was an accident she testified. While waiting for the verdict Mrs. Lonergan fainted several times.

He saw this panther running around his horse and was within shooting distance. Before his rifle could be brought the panther ran toward the woods.

Before the panther had been seen the people of Montoma and surrounding places heard the wild shriek but could not determine what kind of an animal it was.

AIR ARMAMENTS DISTURB EUROPE

Fonck Says Germany Has Found Way to Create War Planes Despite Treaty—France Votes More Money For Air Forces.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Paris, June 29.—Under the guise of commercial aviation, Germany is constructing thousands of bombing planes for use in "the next war" it was charged today by Captain Rene Fonck, France's greatest living "ace," a member of the chamber of deputies and president of the aviation league of France.

Fonck emerged from the great war with more honors than any other French aviator.

Writing in the Journal, Fonck said: "If we had disarmed Germany on land and in the air as England disarmed her upon the seas we should now be secure. But we left the Germans the right of commercial aviation."

"One clause of the Versailles treaty provided for a minimum horsepower engine for all German airplanes. The Germans ostensibly fulfill these conditions, but they build their planes so ruggedly that by a quick transformation they can easily substitute a motor of double horsepower. Thus a metallic limousine-like Junker-Dessau quickly becomes an effective bombing plane."

"German aviation factories have branches in Switzerland, Italy, Holland, Spain and Russia," Captain Fonck asserts. "But Germany's greatest effort is concentrated in Moscow. German engineers in Moscow, Petrograd, Odessa and Alexandrovsk oversee Soviet workers who construct aviation engines and wings from materials imported from Germany."

Fonck does not ask that Germany be forbidden to construct airplanes. He simply pleads that France build enough planes successfully to combat any German menace that may arise.

London, June 29.—"France's answer to Great Britain's reinforcement of her air forces is a decision to enter to rivalry for the air," said the Daily News today, commenting upon the developments in Paris.

The news that France has decided to increase her aerial forces, despite the fact she already has the most powerful air fleet in the world, aroused widespread interest here.

The French chamber of deputies has voted an extra credit of 35,000,000 francs for airplane construction, bringing the total air credits up to more than 210,000,000 francs. Paris advices say, Premier Baldwin's proposal for an international conference to consider limitation of air armaments has been received coldly by the French.

Contracts Awarded for Brick Structure on Fair Street to be Occupied by Spencer's Business School and Freeman Branch Office.

Contracts for the erecting of a three story building on Fair street, adjoining the Burgevin property, have been awarded by The Freeman Publishing Co. to Charles Hoffman and the general work and the Canfield Supply Co. for the plumbing, heating and roof. The ground floor, beside furnishing adequate quarters for the uptown branch office of The Freeman, will contain a store with modern show window.

The second and third stories will be occupied by Spencer's Business School and have been specially planned to meet the requirements of this widely known institution. The plans were made by George Love, the architect, who will supervise the erection of the building, which will be ready for occupancy early in 1924.

CIRCUS BARKER HAD TRAFFIC COP'S UMBRELLA WEDNESDAY

Sluething Work of Officer Fout Resulted in Its Recovery.

The traffic cop at North Front and Wall streets is happy again. His umbrella, used to protect him from the rays of Old Sol, has been recovered through the work of Officer Fred Fout. Officer Fout had a dim suspicion that some of the circus people might have helped themselves, to the umbrella and kept his eyes peeled as he viewed the grounds Wednesday. Sure enough he found the umbrella protecting the head of one of the side show barkers, and called the matter to the attention of Sergeant Hanley who interviewed the barker who said he had bought the umbrella that morning from a man for $2. The umbrella is now back on post and the barker is minus his two dollars.

Attorneys Take "Hap-Dad" Messages To Grand Jury On Court's Order

Justice Wagner Fails to Rule on Their Admissibility as Evidence in Ward Case.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

White Plains, June 29.—Refusing requests of attorneys for Walter S. Ward, millionaire slayer of Clarence Peters, former marine, for further delay, Justice Robert E. Wagner, in the supreme court here today ordered the famous "Hap-Dad" cable messages placed before the extraordinary grand jury investigating Peters' death.

William H. Langburn, Jr., attorney for the Western Union Telegraph Company, and William C. Fitz, counsel for the Postal Telegraph Company, went into the grand jury room with the messages.

The court ruling was announced as "advisory and not mandatory" in that, unless the telegraph company officials refused to open the messages now held under seal, the matter of a direct order could not be issued. The formal order was for the "producing of the messages before the grand jury" and did not pass upon the question of their submission as evidence in the case.

The court informed the attorneys that should they disobey his order he would call them before him to answer to charges of contempt.

Justice Wagner refused to allow such a delay.

The cablegrams are said to be of utmost importance in the investigation in that, it is believed by the state, they throw light on the alleged blackmail plot in which it is said, a group of men, known to Peters, were attempting to secure money from Ward.

The messages were sent to George Ward, father of the younger man, by both Walter Ward and Ralph Ward, another son. The cablegrams are addressed to "Dad" and are signed "Hap" and "Tip Top"—the nicknames of Ward's sons.

"I will not hear you," Justice Wagner told Mills when he sought to argue against the court's ruling. "Messages, such as these, and in this case, are admissible evidence before a grand jury."

William Mundin, in Jail Two Months and a Witness in Ward Case, Swallows Pills.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 29.—New mystery entered the already mysterious Ward-Peters death probe today.

William Mundin, 27, a friend of Clarence Peters, former marine, shot and killed by Walter S. Ward, was in Bellevue Hospital, physicians fighting to save his life, after he had swallowed a number of pills.

Mundin made the suicide attempt in a jail here after having been moved from the Tombs where he has been held two months.

"Yes, I'm a witness in the Ward case—that's all I'll say," Mundin said today. He refused to tell what testimony he would give before the grand jury now investigating the slaying.

Police denied all knowledge of Mundin's part in the Ward investigation, saying he was being held for breaking a parole from the Elmira Reformatory.

MINERS WISH TO AVOID STRIKE

Lewis Anxious to Wind up Convention and Get Down to Cases With Operators on Basis of Present Scale.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Scranton, Pa., June 29.—Demands which are to be presented to the hard coal operators by representatives of the United Mine Workers are expected to be completed late today by the convention of the anthracite workers now in session here. These demands, embracing mainly a 20 per cent wage increase, the check off and a universal eight hour day, are a continuation of those formulated at the Shamokin conference a year ago, but which failed of approval by the operators in the temporary settlement last fall.

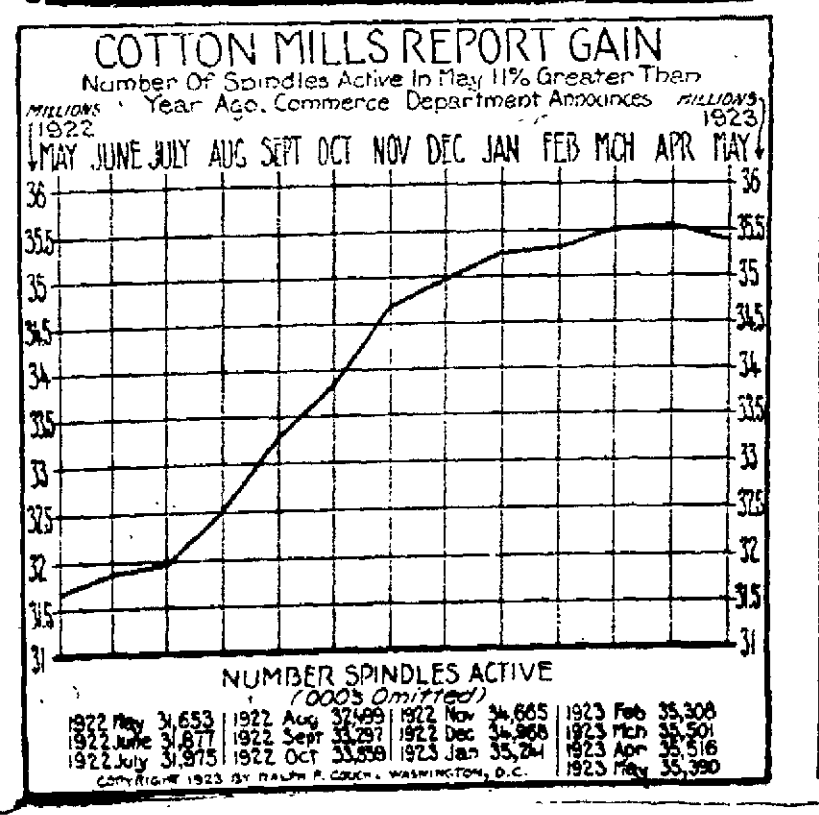

President John L. Lewis is said to favor a renewal of the present scale under a two year contract and he is cautiously guiding the work of the convention against any false step or disturbing act which might endanger negotiation soon to begin with the operators.

The miners are anxious to avoid a suspension this fall and belief prevails that there will be no cessation of work. Lewis is particularly anxious to conclude the convention's work here quickly and get negotiations with the operators under way as soon as possible after July 4.

WE HAVE NO CAUSE TO BE ASHAMED, POINTS OUT PRESIDENT HARDING

American Horse Sense Has Resulted in Prosperity While Radical Experiments in Other Countries Have Failed—4,000,000 Men Lacked Jobs in 1921, now 1,000,000 Jobs Lack Men—Confident of Future.

By Telegram to The Freeman.

Butte, Montana, June 29.—President Harding brought into the north-west today an optimistic and militant message to American business.

To a crowd of thousands that packed closely around the rear platform of his train here he declared the miracle wrought by America's mobilization for war had found its counterpart in the mobilization of business during the menacing depression of two years ago and, going further, he asserted American business now stands only in the doorway of a new era.

"No other nation in the world," said the president, "looks out upon so clear a horizon today."

The president's address was devoted entirely to a survey of world business conditions and a militant defense of the business record of the administration and the manner in which it led the country through the great economic depression that followed the war.

Disavowing partisanship in thus presenting the administration's policies, the president attributed the recovery to the "plain, old-fashioned common sense" of the American business man, aided by an administration at Washington that indulged in no fads and fancies of government paternalism.

He compared conditions in the United States to those existing in Europe, and then said:

"If we are accused of getting nowhere in particular we may reply at any rate we have been able to stay right here, that we regard it as a good place to stay and that day by day we are getting better and better."

"A good many of the folks here had more excitement than we have had, but a good many people in this world would be glad to exchange their excitement for a modest share in our American accumulation of simple contentment and dinner table necessities."

Those who believe the business and economic situation in America is bad were invited by Mr. Harding to look upon conditions in other countries. Many of them, he pointed out, indulged in experiments of a radical nature with disastrous results to their currency and credit stability, as well as a harvest of violence and disorder.

"Instead of riots, strikes, sabotage and premeditated revolution," said the president, "we reaped a harvest of understanding, of established respect among groups and enhanced regard for each other's viewpoints."

No other nation in the world, he added, has been able to parallel the peace time recovery of American business. The president painted a gloomy picture of business and economic conditions when his administration took the helm in Washington, two years ago.

"Inflation and extravagance," he said, "had continued for a time following the cessation of hostilities, to be succeeded suddenly by drastic deflation. Excesses of production and expenditure were suddenly followed by impossible restrictions on both."

Disaster fell upon business and unemployment was everywhere. Two years ago between 4,500,000 and 5,000,000 workers were without jobs. I will not discuss the unfortunate policies which brought on this, but suffice it to say today we have to consider ways and means of filling a million jobs which want workers and can't find them.

"That is the bedrock foundation upon which American business and American administration have erected their confidence that this people will not be led into the paths of devious experimentation the mazes of untried economic theory and the labyrinth of uncertainty."

Early in the spring of 1921 it was realized by these in responsible places that unless measures of amelioration were adopted and business were given some ground for hope the winter would be marked by privation and suffering to a scale unprecedented in the history of our people.

"These conditions involved a menace to society. Europe was torn with distractions and revolutions, distressed by fear of future wars and burdened with debt. A small minority of extremists sought to draw our own country into the maelstrom of social disorganization. Earnest men in Europe were solemnly discussing whether civilization would survive and thoughtful people everywhere recognized that if America should be swept into the vortex of the disaster would be irreparable. I shall not tell you about the many anxious hours the cabinet devoted to these conditions."

"Many sincere people pleaded that the government provide unemployment doles from the public treasury. That policy has been adopted in many European countries with results which did not commend themselves. We believed it could and should be avoided. We based our belief on certain convictions about that unique combination of altruism and common sense of generosity and hard headedness which always has been characteristic of Americans. The government proceeded to do everything in its power to better conditions. The policy of public finance which had kept the hand of government in the tills of the bankers, fleeing away from them the resources which business so desperately needed, was reversed. Qual-

ness was given a tardy chance to get the money it needed. A series of reductions in the federal reserve discount rate was inaugurated. Official accountants and sometimes unpopular gentlemen were set at work pruning down the personnel and expenditure of government. The budget system was inaugurated. Measures were adopted to lighten the taxation load and distribute it more equitably. An international conference for reduction of armament and some menacing causes of war was started. The federal farm loan board was provided with funds in order that it might resume loans to farmers. The war finance corporation was given a credit of half a billion dollars and sent out to relieve the agricultural community.

"We summoned the whole community to take itself by its economic bootstraps and lift itself out of the slough of despondency in which it was mired down. A national conference on unemployment was called. The whole business field was surveyed to determine where more employment could be found and to get men and jobs together. Appeal was made to every employer to find work for as many people as possible. Municipalities pressed public improvement works. Every employing interest was appealed to 'to do it now.'"

"Emergency committees were established all over the country by industries and municipalities to help organize. Labor and capital employers and employees united in a common effort which prove to be one of the demonstrations of applied altruism and intelligent unselfishness that has ever been accomplished on a like scale. Our policy was to encourage the people to help themselves."

"Looking back a scant two years from our present pinnacle of prosperity it is not easy to realize how far we have come. Whatever had been accomplished was made possible by the fact we started with a firm confidence in the capacity of the people to take care of themselves if they were given a fair chance in their aspirations for individualistic freedom in preference to mass control. We thought we knew the American people and we guessed correctly. I think the national mobilization voluntarily accomplished was no less an accomplishment than the great cooperation to win the war. It was brought about by the summons to sense and sanity. The method was unique among the procedures adopted by nations in that after-war crisis. Some of them concluded civilization already was doomed and proceeded to new and strange experiments. Some entered upon the way of communistic organization or disorganization. Some plunged into socialistic projects. Some entered upon inflation and currency debasing, ruining their money systems in order to produce a momentary but dishonest impression of prosperity. Yet others committed themselves to the assumption that the cure for the disorders of peace was more war. One need not recount the misfortunes that followed on the collapse of social organization and industrial capacities in some countries war upon the wreck of financial systems and the destruction of investments in others, nor the industrial paralysis that in some places has followed upon direct contribution from the state treasury."

"We have little occasion to regret that our own country disappointed those who wished to engage in similar business programs. If our procedures have been rather plain and old fashioned they have yet produced results that justify pride and require no apologies."

"Some well meaning but unduly agitated people have feared lest under stress of these hot war times our democratic institutions might prove inadequate. I never felt more cheerful about that particular matter than right now. Instead of strikes, riots, sabotage and premeditated revolution we reaped a harvest of understanding of established respect along grounds of enhanced regard for each other's viewpoints. Such is the interpretation we offer to you of the great American cooperation to conserve the fruits of peace and the fortunes of our country. It is not presented to you as the accomplishment of a particular administration. Rather, it is placed before you as testimony to the supreme sense and sound genius of a nation. No other people has had the fortune to hear all the achievements. None other looks out today upon so clear a horizon and I venture that we stand only in the doorway of the new era."

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

ICE CREAM SODA

"A very thirsty and very warm and very weary boy is coming back to drink me," said the Ice Cream Soda. "He said he wanted me to be all ready for him, so here I am, all ready."

"Of course I could not be ready all by myself but with help and assistance I am ready."

"I tell you what, it is to my credit that I am not contented. Of course I have a little rightful pride. I do puff up with pride and with the fizz stuff that is put into me, too! But I am not unduly conceited and yet there would be every excuse for me if I were. Because my family are loved! People fairly rave over ice cream sodas. The Syrup sons are as popular as they can be. Chocolate is the most popular, but there are Pineapple and Orange and Lemon and Coffee and they are all very popular too.

"I Do Puff Up."

"Then there are the nuts and there is Miss Marshmallow. She is a general favorite. We have such a nice home where it is so cool and comfortable in the hot summer weather.

"Yes, we're right here by the soda water fountain and there is ice for us to rest upon. Then there is Lady Ice Cream. She is a great favorite too.

"I have some of her in my glass now and I have Chocolate Syrup and some wonderful fizzy things were brought out of some of the faucets on the soda fountain. I can't be made by everybody. Of course I must have the best of materials. But some make me better than others. Of course that's only natural.

"There are some people who can do certain things better than others and others who can do other things better than these certain ones. That all sounds very confusing but you must remember I'm an ice cream soda and I'm not a student. What is more, and what makes a better excuse yet for my ignorance and lack of intelligence is the fact that I am about in the summer time when no one is in school and when no one talks so very much about what is correct and what is not correct.

"At least they don't talk that way before me. I hear speeches such as these:

"Um-am, this soda is good."

"My, but I was thirsty."

"Yes, this will cool me off. I was so hot."

"Oh, this is good. This touches the right spot."

"That last speech I hear very, very often. Everyone seems to have a right spot to be touched.

"Then I hear them say, 'Oh, let me treat this time. You treated last time.'"

"Let it be a Dutch treat."

"All right. Let's not argue. I'm too warm. I can only think of the soda I'm going to have."

"So they talk. And you will admit that that isn't the kind of talk that would make a wise thing out of me. It's a very nice, pleasant and cheering talk, but it's not bookish talk. Oh, no, not that at all.

"No one thinks of books when they come in here. They think of paper napkins and straws and a spoon for stirring. That's what they think of and I know. The ice cream soda knows. Of course I am soon to be eaten and the syrup in me will be drunk with a relish after the ice cream has all gone. But the ice cream soda recipe or the way of making ice cream soda will not disappear and so I say I have had all these experiences. You know, of course, what I mean.

"But hush! I must stop my chatter. I see the boy coming back and he is smiling already to see me. I am not quite so puffed up in appearance as I was, but I taste just as good. Heigh-ho, what a smile of welcome. I will give him my best chocolate smile, too."

"And this was what the boy said to the ice cream soda: 'Oh, Ice Cream Soda, You're simply great! You're just what I needed. Just exactly what I needed. I say, Ice Cream Soda, you are great!'"

Filipino Women.

Filipinos have some customs which seem queer to us. A woman does not drive a horse or automobile, or ride a bicycle. She may wish to be a nurse, but men and boys occupy this field. She can do fine embroidery, but the men design the patterns. Yet twice the percentage of Filipino women are earning their living in comparison with Canadian women. Co-education exists throughout the islands.

POEM BY DISABLED VETERAN

Member of Prescott (Ariz.) Post Makes Appeal to Buddies to Become Legionnaires.

Inspired by patriotic addresses made at a recent meeting of the Earnest A. Love post of the American Legion in Prescott, Ariz., Robert Lee Beveridge, a disabled veteran, found that he was unable to sleep when he returned to the hospital following the meeting.

Thinking of the Legion's appeal to men who fought together during the World war, the feelings of Beveridge crystallized into a poem which was read for the first time by Mrs. Harry T. Southworth, Arizona national executive committee woman of the American Legion Auxiliary, at a recent meeting in Prescott addressed by Alvin Owsley, national commander of the American Legion. The disabled man's poem follows:

Say, Bud, have you joined the Legion yet?
Now don't get angry and swear.
For we never can be pure strangers,
you know.
For look at the memories we share,
So I'm asking you, have you joined up yet?
You ought from that button you wear.
There's a light ahead and you ought to be An American Legionnaire.

You're a comrade of mine and I love you, Bud.
Remember the gas alarm
And the O. D. shirt
That was caked with dirt
And served as a coolie farm.
How we used to think in our careless way.

That taps was a sweet goodnight
Till, with heads bowed down,
We heard taps sound
At the burial after the night?

Are you putting your shoulders to the wheel,
And shoving with all your might
To finish the fight you began in France
Or have you steered clear of the
Have you forgotten Belleau, St. Mihiel and Argonne
And your buddies you left over there,
And your crippled chums who are needing you now,
Come on, be a Legionnaire.

You're a comrade of mine, for haven't we fought
On Flanders Field of France
And ducked our head
To the scream of lead,
Or checked the Germans' advance?
We've tightened our belts a notch or two.
Then over the top we've strode,
With a Yankee grin
On a stubborn chin
Or hiked down a shell-torn road.

Of course you belong to the Legion, Bud.
Your service has won you it
There's no one can take it away from you.
But you haven't been working at it.
It's a duty you owe to the fallen slain
That you cannot shirk or shirk.
It's to fight the fight as you used to fight
As a militant Legionnaire.

LITTLE AID WAS NECESSARY

Most All Ex-Service Men and Women Treated in Mayo Hospital Able to Meet Expenses.

Of the 150 cases of ex-service men and women treated during one month at the Mayo hospital, Rochester, Minn., only seven required aid from the local Legion members, according to reports made to department officials of the American Legion in the state.

The Legionnaires at Rochester found some time ago that a serious problem had developed in their city when many former service men and women, learning of the reputation of the Mayo clinic, would come there practically without funds and even though receiving treatment, faced serious consequences. In order to meet this demand for service, certain post funds were set aside and the service officer instructed to handle these cases.

Since that time demands for aid from these patients have practically ended, according to post officials, though willingness to help is still the part of the Rochester Legionnaires.

Some degree of Legion care is offered to every former service man or woman who becomes a patient in the hospital but the requests for financial aid show that most of the patients are self-sustaining during the periods of treatment. The cases in the hospital from all parts of the country, were as follows:

Alabama 2, Arizona 1, Arkansas 2, California 2, Colorado 2, Florida 2, Idaho 2, Illinois 11, Indiana 3, Iowa 16, Kansas 4, Michigan 8, Minnesota 24, Missouri 6, Montana 6, North Dakota 3, Ohio 2, Oklahoma 6, Pennsylvania 6, South Dakota 7, Tennessee 1, Texas 1, Wisconsin 10, Wyoming 2, Canada 4.

Slightly insinuating.
Mrs. Muggs had the reputation among tradesmen of quibbling over the fraction of a cent, and she was living up to it in her argument with the ice man.

"Is that all the ice I get for ten cents?" she demanded peevishly.
"Don't worry, lady," he replied, as patiently as possible. "Some day you might be in a place where you couldn't buy this piece for a million dollars."—American Legion Weekly.

MILITARY SPIRIT GRIPS HIM

"Daddy" Schick, Commander of Illinois Department of Legion, Has Long Been in Service.

Charles W. ("Daddy") Schick, commander of the Illinois department of the American Legion, was a member of a military organization that has been in existence since 1877, known then as the "Governor's Guards."

This organization, in earlier days one of the smartest military organizations, was the nucleus of the Illinois National Guard, and its history dates back to the crux zouaves of the Civil war.

Their proficiency in arms, which made them the envy of every other organization, was founded on tactics and training given by the gallant Major Ellsworth, the first northern officer to fall in the war, who was a protege of Abraham Lincoln.

Only five of the original company from which the "Governor's Guard" was formed are alive, and "Daddy" Schick, who was a member of the drum corps, is one of them.

The organization participated in many military contests, which were frequent in earlier days, and was once in competition with the famous Meyer's Cadets of Toledo. The Toledo organization went through the manual of arms blindfolded, but the Illinois organization stepped out on the drill field and without a single command executed the entire manual.

Commander Schick's World war service was unusual. At the very beginning of the war he left a position with a prominent life insurance company to become an illing officer of the United States navy.

Stationed with the naval reserve force of Illinois, he enrolled approximately 10,000 men. He later received an assignment to sea, and served in foreign waters. He left the service with the rank of lieutenant.

He became a charter member of the naval post of the American Legion of Chicago, composed entirely of men who served in the navy, and in 1921 was named commander of the post. Under his guidance the post attained a membership of five hundred.

"Daddy," as he is familiarly known to every Illinois Legionnaire, has one failing. His early training is responsible, perhaps, when he served with the "Governor's Guards." If there is a drum in sight he is certain to get use of it. At New Orleans he usurped the place of a member of an Illinois drum corps in the parade, and forsook his place of honor at the head of the Illinois delegation just to get to beat that drum.

POSTER CONTEST IN SCHOOLS

Kansas Children Interested in American Legion Campaign for Endowment of Orphans' Home.

School children of Kansas are evincing great interest in the American Legion campaign for endowment of the proposed home for orphaned children of those men who gave their lives in the World war. This interest has been heightened by the announcement of a poster contest to be conducted in the schools.

Posters will be submitted with a view to attracting attention to the campaign for endowment of the home, which has already been presented to the Legionnaires of the state. Three grades have been arranged—students from the high schools of the state; pupils from the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, and from those below the sixth grade. Substantial cash prizes will be given in each one of the classes. All posters sent in will be made use of by the Legion in its campaign, but only the best posters will go to the judges for selection of winners. The superintendent of schools is to determine the best posters of the three grades and forward the three to headquarters of the Legion in Topeka.

Sweet Charity.
A big burly man called at the rectory and when the door was opened asked to see the rector's wife. A woman well known for her charitable impulses, "Madame," he addressed her in a broken voice, "I wish to draw your attention to the terrible plight of a poor family in this district. The father is dead, the mother is too ill to work and the nine children are starving. They are about to be turned into the cold, cold streets unless some one pays their arrears in rent, which amounts to fifty dollars."

"How terrible!" exclaimed the lady. "May I ask who you are?"
The sympathetic visitor applied his handkerchief to his eyes.
"I'm the landlord," he sobbed.

TRAINED CATFISH HELPS FISHERMEN

Makes Nine-Mile Trips Harassed to Trailing Lines With Baited Hooks.

BRINGS IN BIG HAULS

Three Mile Bay, N. Y.—Seth Small of this place and William Loomis of Chautauque, who are partners in the eisco chasing industry and who, during the shipping season, ship tons of these edible fish to distant markets, have developed a most remarkable scheme for making their daily catches.

When the law came in which forbade them to use nets, they found they were unable to accomplish much with ordinary hooks and lines. Their daily catches were never large enough to constitute a paying shipment, and they were about decided to go out of the eisco business.

One day they hooked an 80-pound catfish and managed to get it into a large tank they used for the storage of live fish. They began training the big cat to follow them as they passed around the tank at feeding times. Seth and Bill took turns at feeding it, and when it got so that it knew each they fashioned a "muskey" line harness for Trained Catfish.

It from which trailed a dozen or more lengths—50 or 60 feet long—with small hooks attached at intervals of about six inches.

Fish Followed Them.

The cat was taken down to the bay and put back into the water. Bill would walk along the shore around the "point," and in the direction of Chautauque scattering food the while, and the cat would follow him. When Seth would go over to Bill's village and repeat this performance, also returning to the bay he following the shore around the point.

Then the hundreds of hooks were baited with bits of smoked haddock, crab meat and worms, and Bill or Seth would set out, as just explained, and the cat would follow them for the sake of the food stuffs that the partners tossed to it as they walked along. But now it should be stated, neither man makes the entire trip from village to village. After going about a quarter of a mile they follow into the woods and return to their homes. The big cat keeps on his way and generally arrives in one or the other of its home ports with the trailing lines heavily weighed down with eisco and "finger" fish, such as pike and pickerel, with a occasional "muskey" for the fishermen's good luck.

While the catfish only weighs 80 pounds there are occasions when it comes to its landings with over a hundred pounds of fish on its hooks. It usually makes two nine-mile trips daily, but just at present the eisco industry is at a standstill, as the big catfish is suffering from rheumatism or something, due to its steady confinement in the tank during the long winter months.

The new production is of 40-mark value but it is expected to be in demand only with collectors, 40-mark stamps no longer being used since postage has gone into 100 mark figures even for domestic matter.

Cider Fumes Kill Two.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, June 23.—Ramsey MacDonald is threatening to quit the leadership of the British Labor parliamentary party unless the Laborite members of the House of Commons maintain better discipline, according to reports printed in the press today.

Parliamentary Laborites will hold a meeting Tuesday to consider the suspension of four of their colleagues from the House of Commons Wednesday for the disorderly scene they created during debate upon public health policy.

The Labor party is the second strongest in Commons, ranking as the official opposition party.

WALLING'S KNEE WORSE AFTER RACE

Suffers Intense Pain But His Crew Is "Toast Of Town" At Poughkeepsie—Mrs. Victory For Western Eight—Cornell Nosed Out Win In Freshman Event.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 29.—Dow Walling, 21 year old hero of Washington's victorious eight, winners of the annual intercollegiate regatta, was today suffering intense pain from the infected knee which, for three days preceding the event, threatened to keep him in the hospital instead of at the stroke seat of the "huskies" shell.

Walling had to be lifted from the Washington boat at the finish of the race last evening when the western crew came in ahead of Navy, leading Columbia, Syracuse, Cornell and Pennsylvania in the order named.

The Washington crew was the "toast of the town" today. While considered a dangerous rival to formidable eastern eight, the invaders—particularly with Walling injured—were not expected to capture such a clean cut victory.

While time of 11:03 1/5 for the three mile row, was not a record breaker, when Navy's last year time of 13:35 3/5 is considered, the speed of the Westerners, under existing weather and water conditions, showed their power. The first mile of the race was run in a tight race the last two miles in a downpour.

Washington's victory is the first ever taken by the west in the 25 years of the intercollegiate regatta's history.

In the Freshman two mile race, one of the most thrilling seen in a Poughkeepsie regatta, Cornell defeated Washington by an eyelash, by one fifth of a second. Syracuse finished third, Pennsylvania fourth, Columbia fifth.

Syracuse won the two mile Junior varsity race by a length. Cornell was second, Columbia third, Pennsylvania fourth.

Wash "Days" or Wash "Hours"—Which?

"Washday has no horrors for me now! I can commence feeling 'bright as a dollar' and finish not one whit 'spent'."

That's the way one happy, progressive housewife summed up the advantages of—

The Electric Washer.

Soak the clothes while the family breakfasts. A mere turn of the wrist starts the machine washing. It goes on about its business while you turn to another task. Within twenty minutes one tub full of wash is done—snow white—and all the clothes are on the line and in again by noon.

GIES GETS NEWS OF HIS SONS' DROWNING

By Telegram to The Freeman.
 Albany, June 29.—Henry J. Gies, Detroit grocer, who has been on a three weeks' automobile tour of New York state, was notified here yesterday that his two sons, John and Frank, 18 and 22, were drowned in Detroit on Sunday.

When Gies was stopped at State and Pearl streets by Traffic Officer Peter Reinde, he became indignant. "Why are you stopping me, I didn't violate a traffic ordinance," he said to the officer.

"Come with me to police headquarters, there is a message waiting for you," the officer replied.

When Mr. Gies was handed the telegram he was almost overcome. He left for home immediately by train.

The officer had been asked to watch for a car carrying a Michigan license plate.

If any of the furniture has become cracked in moving, soften beeswax until it is of the consistency of putty; then with a thin steel knife press it firmly into the cracks. Sandpaper around the filled-in parts and work the dust into the beeswax to give it a wood color and when the furniture is varnished the repair will not be visible.

A PLEA FOR THE OLDER TEACHERS

Taxpayer Points Out How Poughkeepsie Brought About Maximum Pay for Those in Service Eleven Years Without Strain on Budget.

It is a very peculiar attitude which the Board of Education of the City of Kingston holds toward the teachers of the public schools here.

It is the sort of attitude which, if a teacher should hold toward her pupils, would not be conducive to development or progress. We expect a teacher to be encouraging, sympathetic and interested in the pupils under her care, holding them to the rules under which they must work, but granting them any privileges to which they might be entitled.

Is it too much to expect this same attitude from the Board of Education to the teachers who work under them and for them?

Recently there has been by law a general increase in the wages of the school teachers throughout the state. Only too recent, this change. The new teachers who begin without experience, start at the minimum salary and are increased $75 each succeeding year until they reach the maximum pay.

This is fair and satisfactory to all. But what about the teachers who have been giving the best that is in them for years and years before fair pay came in to keep pace with the rising cost of living? Teachers of our children, teachers of some of us who now send our own little ones to the same schools where we went ourselves?

Is there not due them some consideration for long service? For ability gained through years of experience?

What should or could be done for the teachers who have spent the best years of their lives in teaching in the Kingston schools? Something which will not be unfair to the younger teachers, and which will not make too great an addition to the budget? Not more pay than the others. That would be manifestly wrong.

The point to be brought forward is that these teachers of long service should reach as speedily as possible the maximum pay given to any teacher. I say "as speedily as possible," for please note this:

A teacher on retiring from active service, receives a pension of half pay. Not half the pay of her last year, if you please. But half the average pay of her last five years.

You don't have to be very proficient in arithmetic to figure out that the older teachers who are ready to retire first, will not have reached the maximum pay long enough to get half of it for a pension. It may surprise those who read this to learn that 25 teachers now in active service have been teaching over 25 years in the Kingston schools.

The maximum pay is $1,400. Shall even one of these faithful teachers be retired on less than $700 a year? And do you, who went to school to her, want to see her try to live on it?

Let us consider for a minute what other Hudson river cities are doing in this line.

In Middletown all teachers who have been in service eight years receive the maximum pay.

In Newburgh, too, no teacher who has been in the schools over eight years gets less than the maximum. In Poughkeepsie, the method adopted is as practical to achieve this result as is as follows:

The board of education, willing and eager to bring the older teachers to the maximum as rapidly as possible, divided all their teachers into seven groups. Group one, and a four years' experience; group two, more than four and under nine years; group three, five years longer experience; group four, five more years; and so on, making seven groups in all.

The seventh group comprised teachers who had more than twenty-nine years' experience. All the teachers in this group were brought to the maximum during the year when the schedule was adopted. The teachers in the older groups were given extra increments or increases. The result is that, beginning with September, 1924, all teachers who have been in service more than eleven years will be at the maximum salary. This has been achieved in a gradual way which has put no abrupt strain on the budget.

And now, Kingston. What is the matter with Kingston? Can't we afford it? Oh, yes, we have money enough in the treasury to work out such a scheme as Poughkeepsie, but the board of education will not do it. Why not?

The budget this year is larger than last year, that is true. Not due entirely, however, as stated by the board in the newspapers, to the added increment of teachers' salaries as decreed by the legislature. Included in the extra expense is a raise of $3159 a year for each of the janitors of the schools. No kick on this, understand. Glad to see them raise. Congratulate them. But let's be fair. Let's give our teachers what they deserve instead of resenting the fact that they want it. For seven of them get less than the janitors.

The writer of this is not a teacher and is not related to any teacher. Only a taxpayer, willing and ready to pay school taxes to have my children taught by fine, intelligent women who give out the best of themselves for long dreary years to make the boys and girls of Kingston amount to something, and who well deserve to have their faithfulness of service recognized.

The principle I am advocating will not raise anyone's individual school tax one single dollar. I ask other fathers and mothers to express their opinions on this subject by letters to The Freeman. Let's have an open forum. Answer these questions: Do you not think that the teachers who have served 15, 20 and 25 years should be raised more rapidly to the maximum salary than the younger teachers? Do you not feel that teachers, principals, superintendent and board should all work together for the betterment of the teachers' position and the teachers' salary?

If the Kingston Board of Education can be made to feel that the sentiment of the people is for recognition

Unhurt by Long Fast.
Scottish history tells of a certain John Scott, who in 1531, having failed in a law case, abstained, presumably by way of protest, from all meat and drink for 30 days. The king having heard of this and being resolved to test the truth of the report, ordered Scott to be locked up in a cell in Edinburgh castle with only a small supply of bread and water. After 32 days it was found that the bread and water had not been touched, and from the fact that Scott immediately on his release went out and harangued the crowd that was awaiting his appearance he would not seem to have suffered greatly as a result of his ordeal.

Foretold Enemy's Moves.
It is recorded of Napoleon that on the night preceding the battle of Austerlitz he was in conference with his generals. The great military leader had a map spread out before him. On it he had placed several pins to mark certain positions of strategic importance. "Gentlemen," said the Little Corporal, "tomorrow we shall move there"—pointing to the first pin on the map—"the enemy will move there"—his fingers resting on another pin—"we shall defeat him!" The great military genius was right. The French moved as Napoleon predicted. The enemy arranged their plans as he had foreseen, and the forces of the republic gained an overwhelming victory on the plains of Austerlitz.

of long service, then what possible reason can they advance for denying them such an advantage, to give them an easier time now, and a decent annuity to retire on after they have worn themselves out teaching our children?

I close quoting some verses written 25 years ago by a teacher, who fought for these same principles, and lost out, and had to get married to keep from starving to death.

Hope Long Deferred.

Year by year, and day by day,
She lived in hopes of higher pay.
She saw the city prosperous grow,
She saw the schoolhouse overflow
With hosts of children large and small,
And patiently she taught them all,
And as the seasons swiftly flew
She sometimes taught their children too!

Through weary months of busy days,
The schoolma'am hoped
She did all that a woman could,
Her arguments were sound and good,
She drew petitions up so fine
That all the people ran to sign,
The common council all agreed
That she should have it, yes, indeed,
The Board of Education made
Long, swelling, promises of aid,
While out of all the tangled maze
The schoolma'am hoped

But weary decades came and went,
Until her faithful life was spent,
And now across her lonely grave
The long green grasses gently wave,
Her tombstone in its ancient place,

Stands up, and lies upon its face,
For though it says she has gone higher,
I know her soul must still aspire,
And harkening, long for Gabriel's days

When every schoolma'am gets a raise!

GRAMMAR PUPILS SUMMER SCHOOL

A six weeks' session for grammar school students opens in School No.
7, Crown street, uptown, July 9. The object of this session is to assist those students who have not completed their preliminary subjects and are not qualified to enter high school.
At the close of the term a special examination will be given by Principal Lewis and those who attain the required standing will be admitted to the high school course in September, thus saving a half year in their work.

A similar course was conducted last year and all of the students were successful in passing the test given.

The program will provide for one hour periods offering a review equivalent to twelve weeks of the regular school work.

The course and examination will be based upon the regular regents outline.

The work will be in charge of Arthur H. Russell, principal of School No. 2, 53 Brewster street.

Major-General Mason M. Patrick.

Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Army Air Service, has just been awarded his double wings as a qualified airplane pilot, despite the fact that he is 50 years of age.
The majority of airplane officers are in their early twenties, and it was a belief in the service that older men were not qualified to make good pilots.

"Better End" Is Correct.

When one speaks of pursuing a course of action to the "better end" he means that he will follow it to the last and direct extremity—death itself.
While the phrase in this sense has the sanction of good usage, it is probable that originally the expression was to the "better end." This latter form is used properly to designate a crisis, or the moment of an extremity. When, for instance, a vessel has paid out all her cable, it has run out to the "better end"—the end which is secured within the vessel and little used. Robinson Crusoe, in describing a terrible storm, says: "We rode with two anchors ahead and the cables veered out to the better end."

Benjamin.

Benjamin was standing on the front walk when a farmer driving a team of big draft horses stopped in front of the house, got down off the wagon, and handed the lines to Benjamin, saying: "Here, sonny, hold my team while I take these eggs in." When he came back the lines were hung over the step on the side of the wagon and "Sonny" stood with his hands in his pockets. The farmer said: "I thought I told you to hold the team." Benjamin replied: "Well, if they wanted to run away I couldn't stop them and if they didn't want to run away, there's no need of holding them."

The Stage.

A friend of ours who wrote a play writes us: "It's going good, Honnery.
The first night the audience forgot his umbrella. The stage manager's got it.
The second night a man passing the theater slipped on a banana peel and fell against a person who was looking at the picture in the lobby, and they both rolled into the house. So that was two audiences, anyhow. The way we're working it now, all the company members not in the scene are required to sit out front and talk, like a society night. If I can get a date I'm going to radio the show and make 'em listen even if they don't look."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

The Ballerina Had a Kick.

Enrico Cecchetti, the master of the Russian ballet, who taught Petronia to dance, is responsible for this story of the power back of a ballerina's kick:
"Fanny Elliser was once crossing the ocean, and when she was lying in her berth one night she saw a man stealing toward her. She always kept her jewels under her pillow, and she immediately made up her mind that he was a thief. She waited till he came near to her, then she kicked him in the cheek, and he fell down dead on the spot."—From the Argonaut.

Our patrons have no doubt noted the wide variety of stories and plays in which Miss Talmadge has appeared, commencing with "Smilin' Through."

In choosing "Within the Law" it was decided to give to the screen a de luxe interpretation of a great American play—the first American story of her late series. As Mary Turner, the innocent and beautiful shop girl driven to a life of crime within the law—Miss Talmadge has very great and entirely different acting opportunities. The role is unique and distinctive because it gives her her first chance to portray the fire and passion and revenge of a woman scorned and persecuted. Never was she more superb than in the great American drama

Ganna Walska, soprano.

In the famous old Latin Quarter of Paris, where Svengali hypnotized the heroine of George du Maurier's "Trilby" to make her sing, Mme. Ganna Walska underwent a similar treatment on mental suggestion before she made her Paris debut in a charity rendition of "Rigoletto," in which she took the role of Gilda, in the Paris Opera House. Auto-suggestion was used by the hypnotist, though her actions on the stage were perfectly normal. Mme. Walska, who in private life is Mrs. Harold F. ## RECALLS ADOBE WALLS BATTLE

Fiftieth Anniversary of Historic Contest Next Year.

HELD 700 INDIANS AT BAY

In the remote reaches of the West, where adventurous pioneering still goes on and the epic of the conquering of the West is kept keenly alive in friendly stories, few tales are told that carry such a thrilling portrayal of the early days as that of the Adobe Walls fight. In the later days of the West when a man who had taken part in that terribly one-sided struggle appeared in a community he was singled out as a hero and all honor done to him.

Now the Adobe Walls fight is to be vividly recalled before the whole country, for next year will be the fiftieth anniversary of the historic conflict. A movement is already on foot in Oklahoma and Kansas to convert the scene of the encounter into a public park and memorial, says the New York Times.

The fight at Adobe Walls—or 'Dobe Walls, as the natives call it—ranks with Forsyth's battle with the Cheyennes and Battle Sioux at Beecher's Island, where Colorado and Kansas have joined in putting up a monument, and with the Wagon Box fight near Fort Fetterman in Montana. All those engagements represent the successful defense of a few white men against the surprise attacks of apparently overwhelming numbers of Indians.

But Musterson, later a well-known frontier figure and in quite recent years, up to the very time of his death, a few months ago, a deputy United States marshal in New York city, was in the 'Dobe Walls fight. At that time he was a slip of a boy, engaged in the dangerous business of hunting buffalo for a living. Nearly all those with him at the time of the Indian attack were fellow hide hunters. All were skilled users of firearms.

A woman, Mrs. William Olds, who had come with her husband from Dodge City to open a restaurant at Adobe Walls, went through the siege behind the sun-baked walls of the little settlement. Two of the defenders of the settlement are still living—Andy Johnson of Dodge City and Fred Leonard of Utah. Twenty-eight white men took part in the fight, among them being "Billy" Dixon, a celebrated marksman.

Adobe Walls is on the Canadian river in northwestern Oklahoma, about 50 miles southeast of Guymon. The settlement took its name from adobe walls which were standing in the earlier pioneer days.

Adobe Walls as Shield. The hide hunters of the seventies hit on the old site as a likely place for a settlement. In 1874, the year of the Indian fight, there was a lively frontier settlement there. There was a stockade around the little group of buildings, all of which were of adobe—very fortunate for those present, as was soon to be demonstrated. All the buildings faced to the east, the main ones in a row. There was the store of Rath & Wright at the south end, with a big pile of buffalo hides at the rear of the building. Then came Hanrahan's saloon, and 30 yards north of that was Leonard & Meyers' store, forming a corner of the stockade. A mess house stood at another corner of the picket stockade and near that was a well. The mud walls of the buildings were two feet thick. This form of construction afforded warmth in winter and coolness in summer. Around the settlement were low sandhills. About 1,200 yards away was a butte-like hill, of considerable height, where Dixon, the marksman, brought down an Indian and was credited with the best long-distance shot of the day.

Indian depredations were common in the spring and early summer of 1874, and the business of hide hunting, always dangerous at its best, had become unusually hazardous. But the hide hunters were not men to be deterred by such frontier dangers. A large party gathered at the Walls to start out on June 27. Twenty of those at the settlement on the day of the fight were buffalo hunters. The others were merchants and their clerks. The men sat up late on the night of the 28th. The weather was sultry, and the doors of the stores and other buildings were open.

The talk ran to the killing of four hide hunters by Indians in the vicinity of the Walls only a few days before. But nobody gave any indication of intending to abandon the projected hunt. By one o'clock in the morning all were asleep, blankets being spread on the floors in the various buildings.

About two o'clock in the morning occurred an incident which had an important bearing on the outcome. The ridge pole in Hanrahan's saloon broke with a report which aroused the entire settlement. The roof did not give way entirely, but was sagging in a threatening manner, so every one turned out to help repair the damage. By the time repairs on the roof were finished it was dawn. Dixon went down to the creek nearby to get his saddle pony, which had been staked there. As he approached the creek he saw what appeared to be an army of Indians in silhouette against the red sunrise. The Indians were Kiowas, Cheyennes and Comanches. Their war bonnets were fluttering and they were coming at a gallop. As soon as they saw that they were discovered they gave the war whoop and lashed their ponies to top speed. Dixon fired and dashed for the stockade on the back of his frightened pony.

It was supposed that the Indians would pursue their usual tactics and would merely circle the buildings, killing such men as were outside and driving off the live stock. But the Indians had been told by their chief medicine man that the white men would all be asleep and could be killed with clubs. This would have happened had not the ridge pole in the saloon broken as it did.

The Indians charged up to the stockade and through the gates. They broke every pane of glass in the buildings and hammered on the doors with the butts of their rifles. Dixon had reached Hanrahan's in safety. The Shadler brothers, asleep in their wagon outside the stockade, had been killed and scalped. The defenders of the Walls, it developed, had been split into three parties. Some of the men found that the ammunition for their buffalo guns was in other buildings, but others were not so unfortunate, and enough of a return fire was poured upon the Indians to drive the attackers away temporarily. Several Indians had been shot down, and some of the wounded were trying to crawl out of the stockade.

The Indians, enraged at the failure of their first attack, now came on in charge after charge. Just as the Cheyenne chief Roman Nose later attacked Forsyth's scouts at Beecher Island. They rode up to the stockade and fired through the pickets. The horses of the buffalo hunters were in the stockade tied to the wagons so an early start could be made. The Indians shot arrows and bullets into the horses, killing all of them, in order to deprive the defenders of any chance of getting away.

A Mystery of the Battle. "Billy" Tyler, one of the defenders, who went to the stockade to get a better shot at the Indians, was shot through the lungs and died in a few minutes. The hunters who made a stand in the saloon were short of ammunition, so Dixon and Hanrahan made a dash for Rath's store, where there was a plentiful supply, and came back with enough for all the big "50" guns, with which the plainmen could do deadly work.

The Indians, 700 in number at the start, kept up their attacks until two o'clock in the afternoon. Apparently they thought it impossible that such a small number of men could hold out against such odds. But the hide hunters fought coolly and took no chances. Behind the thick adobe walls they were comparatively safe. They poured forth a deadly fire from windows and doorways. Every attack cost the Indians heavily in lives. "All the horses in the corral had been killed, and, even after the attacks slackened, the situation of the beleaguered party seemed to be hopeless. Realizing that the hide hunters could not be dislodged by direct attack, the Indians strove to starve out the party. They kept up a scattering fire, to show they were watching every avenue of escape.

After dark on the second day, Henry Lease, a buffalo hunter, took his big "50" and started for Dodge City. Nobody had much hope that he would get through. His greatest ranks with that of Donovan, Piller, Stillwell and Trudeau of the Forsyth scouts, who wormed their way through the investing Cheyennes and Sioux and made their way to Fort Wallace. Lease reached Dodge and gave the alarm, but his journey took several days, and the plight of the buffalo hunters grew worse and worse.

On the fifth day of the siege, shortly before the relief party appeared, Olds, the husband of the only woman present, was accidentally killed. He was climbing down a ladder, and in some manner his rifle was discharged, the top of his head being blown off. At that it was supposed he had been killed by an Indian. His wife saw him fall. She had gone through the siege with the utmost courage, encouraging the men to keep up the fight, and seemingly not being alarmed over the prospect of death or capture.

By the time the relief party arrived, the Indians had withdrawn; 200 had been killed. The Indian allies had been on the warpath several months and had killed nearly 200 people on raids in New Mexico, Texas, Colorado and Kansas. They were exultant over their easy progress, and their setback at Adobe Walls came as a stunning blow.

ROADS CLEARED OF SIGNS

Washington Strips All Away to Give Drivers Clear Vision.

In making a clean-up of advertising signs, posters, placards and literature of all sorts along the state highways of Washington, district engineers and maintenance crews are playing no favorites, and are no respecters of persons, places, things or corporations.

Everything has to go. From the postcards to the sheet iron weather registers and the big, ornate de luxe frames. The purpose of the highway department is to make the roads more sightly and to insure safety. Endless rows of colored billboards have obscured the view of automobilists. Curiously enough, the law covering this work has been on the statute books for twenty years and was dug up and re-enacted by the last assembly.

"Uncle Sam" Is Dead.

"Uncle Sam" John William Wood, six feet eight inches tall, of Columbus, O., is dead. He was a victim of sleeping sickness. Whenever a patriotic parade was held, John Wood marched at the head of the procession as "Uncle Sam." His coffin was seven feet long.

The Finest Line in English Poetry.

An English critic thinks that the finest line in English poetry is from Wordsworth's "Tintern Abbey": "Whose dwelling is the light of setting suns." Tennyson once said that this was "almost the grandest in the English language, giving the sense of the abiding in the transient."

Expense Didn't Bother Yanks.

The French could not understand the zeal of the American artillerymen, of the One hundred and fifty-first field artillery, which worked in conjunction with the One hundred and sixty-eighth infantry. These soldiers were national guardsmen from Minnesota. They worked tirelessly. They labored like stokers, stripped to the waist, covered with grime and grease, with only their metal helmets for protection. Their bravery arms lifted great rounds of ammunition to the cannon. "Why do you use so much ammunition?" asked the French in amazement. "That costs money."

"Plenty more where that came from," the Yanks would grin, jamming in another charge. These artillerymen seemed to love their guns and to enjoy working with them. They gave them pet names, like mascots. "Old Dutch Cleanser" spoke for itself. And there were "Edith" and "Grace," too, probably so named in honor of the girls who stayed at home. They talked back to the German Berthas—and had the last word.—From "Rainbow Bright," by Lawrence O. Stewart.

A Lost Town.

The clerk of Nye county, Nevada, has offered to sell the railway station of Rhyolite, which is on the edge of Death valley, in default of taxes that amount to $51. The station cost $50,000, but the company to which it belonged is defunct, the tracks are torn up, and Rhyolite, which in 1912 was a city of 12,000 people, has not a single inhabitant. It became a populous place overnight because of a gold strike and collapsed almost as suddenly when the bubble burst.—Youth's Companion.

Loyal to Mother.

Elmer and Margaret discovered a new kind of wild flower in the woods near their playground. "I'll ask my mother what it is," said Elmer. "Maybe she won't know," discouraged Margaret. To which remark Elmer replied, with great loyalty: "She will, too—the things my mother knows are every one."

The Region Known as Patagonia.

Patagonia is a geographic term formerly applied to that part of South America lying south of the thirty-eighth parallel. The region was discovered and named by Magellan in 1520 and was left unclaimed until 1881 when by treaty it was divided between Chile and Argentina. The name now has no political significance. The part of land west of the Andes is the Chilean territory of Magallanes; that on the east side of the mountains constitutes the Argentine territories of Rio Negro, Chubut and Santa Cruz. The Chilean section of what was Patagonia contains the southernmost city in the world—Punta Arenas.

A brick fell on the head of Charles H. Brislin during the great San Francisco earthquake. It hurt. So Brislin invented the earthquake-proof brick, resolving that if he ever happened to be around another earthquake the occurrence would not be repeated. ## HEALTH OFFICIALS END CONFERENCE Milbank Fund Demonstration Work Described by Drs. Farmer and Bristol—1,112 Health Workers in Attendance.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Saratoga Springs, N. Y., June 29—The twenty-second annual conference of sanitary officials and public health nurses of New York state closed here yesterday after one of the most successful meetings in the history of the public health work of the Empire State. The total registration during the three days' session numbered 1,112 health workers including 472 health officers representing 633 health districts, 239 public health nurses, 15 sanitary supervisors, 43 state supervising nurses, 83 members of the staff of the State Department of Health and 260 guests and speakers.

At the closing session on Thursday morning Dr. Eugene R. Kelley, state commissioner of health of Massachusetts discussed the outstanding problems for the public health administrator, touching upon the question of cooperation among the various voluntary and official health agencies and particularly the relations of the health department with the medical and general nursing profession. Dr. Kelley summarized the most essential difference between public health administrative work of the future and that of the past as follows: "In the past public health work has been, broadly speaking, principally concerned with those things which could be done in the manner of handling communities in the mass, or things that could be done for the average citizen without the citizen himself being obliged to display any particular effort or initiative. The public health work of the future will deal increasingly with principles and practices of personal hygiene, for the successful consummation of which the average citizen must do a considerable part of the work himself in cooperation with the health administrator."

Dr. Thomas P. Farmer health commissioner of Syracuse reported progress in the organization of the tuberculosis and public health demonstration for which that city was recently selected by the Milbank Memorial Fund. "The purpose of this demonstration," said Dr. Farmer, "is to determine whether Syracuse with proper organization and at reasonable expense, can reduce its death rate from tuberculosis and other preventable diseases to a practical minimum, and to ascertain the proper organization and per capita cost of such undertaking. It is necessary that the demonstration also show to the people of Syracuse that the work can be made permanent by them without hardship." Dr. Farmer described the work which has already been done to obtain more complete reporting of cases of tuberculosis, to increase the staff of the bureau of tuberculosis of the city health department, to develop diptheria immunization among children of pre-school age and to increase the health educational activities of Syracuse. "In addition to the above mentioned activities," asserted Dr. Farmer, "the demonstration is planning activities in the fields of infant welfare, prenatal and maternity hygiene, school hygiene, industrial hygiene, venereal diseases and mental hygiene."

Dr. Leverett D. Bristol health officer of Cattaraugus county told of the organization of the second demonstration of the Milbank Fund in that county, where for the first time in the history of New York State and as a result of the choice of Cattaraugus county by the Directors of the Milbank Fund, the county board of health and the county health officer have been appointed. The county has been divided into districts in each of which there will be a permanent health officer and clinic. The Olean City laboratory has been developed into a county laboratory. ## HAVE BUILT FLOATING CITY

Loggers in British Columbia Own "Town" Which Can Be Moved From Place to Place.

At the foot of a precipitous cedar-studded wall of rock in the waters of the inland passage, British Columbia, lies Simoon, the floating village. An enchanted place it is, far from the bustle and bustle of the world and rich in the romance of the frontier. During most of the year Simoon has eight houses; sometimes, as when people from the outlying districts come to town, the number is almost doubled, for in that region when a man travels he frequently takes his house with him!

To understand "Simoon City" one must understand the country round about. The coast is marked by long inlets, arms and sounds where the abrupt mountain sides are thickly clothed in fir, cedar and hemlock. The shores offer little chance for building a house, and the water is much too deep for driving piles. So the lumbermen who work the forests—hand loggers, most of them—are build booms of huge and buoyant cedar logs, and on them erect their houses of cedar shakes. When a logger has cut all of the timber on a concession he must move somewhere else; naturally a floating house saves time and labor. It can be towed readily behind a row boat; and if the owner has a motor boat, so much the better.

Some 20 years ago a man with more business instinct than his fellows saw the need of a store and opened one afloat in a sheltered place called Simoon sound. He did a flourishing business from the first. Soon a post office was added. Now a "city" has sprung from that humble beginning: eight houses, and in slack periods loggers bring more!

On boat nights, which occur once a week when the steamer from the outside world calls, "Simoon City" is a busy place; then its population is swelled to perhaps 100. There are the regular loggers, great bearded fellows in mackinaws and caked boots, a sprinkling of Indians, a Japanese fisherman or two, the crew of a forestry patrol boat and at times guests from a pleasure launch.

For beautifying the village old boats, Indian dugouts and boxes here and there have been made to bloom with gay flowers; and in such rude containers there are also little vegetable gardens, for the women of Simoon are thrifty.

The main attraction, perhaps, is the Bear Trap restaurant, a long, rough room with log flooring, which offers meals and soft drinks, and which contains a photograph to cheer the bearded men.—Youth's Companion.

Birds Have Sharp Eyes.

A student of nature says that he thinks we may be safe in saying that, on an average, birds see 100 times better than man. By watching each other's actions birds will go a hundred miles to a carcass; and under favorable atmospheric conditions a bird can see a worm on freshly-plowed ground at a distance of 300 feet.

Wittily Expressed.

A severe critic, speaking of a work in terms which at first appear flattering, said: "There is a great deal in this book which is new, and a great deal that is true." Then he added: "But it unfortunately happens that those portions which are new are not true, and those that are true are not new."

has been established, three fellowships for physicians have been founded at the Trudeau School of Tuberculosis at Saranac Lake, educational work has been started among the Indians under the direction of a nurse assigned to the Reservation. Three chest clinics have already been held and two hundred people have been examined. A survey of all the crippled children of the county has been made.

SLOW IN GROWTH

Interesting to Trace Evolution of Printed Picture.

Engraving Really Antedates Civilization—Invention of the Printing Press Step in Upward Move.

Engraving a design on a bit of permanent material is older far than history; there exists a piece of mammoth ivory on which is deeply scratched the portrait of the mammoth itself, and not by any means inadequately, by some prehistoric artist. But the art of taking impressions from the engraved surface, of printing this designed matrix, was only discovered during the Fifteenth century, writes Will Simoons in Arts and Decoration. The first real prints, as we know them today, came in response to the demand for visualized ideas in duplicates, from a budding democracy, newly formed with the guilds that were organized for self-protection by the middle classes of the feudal age. From the beginning the print was the product of the people, for the people, as opposed to art made for the churches or for the nobility; for in feudal times, in the Fourteenth century, only the priests could read and write, only the nobles could own books and pictures; the others were peasants and "varlets."

The visualization of ideas, Ideography, is one of the most potent forms of education, and so, as the people became more and more informed the demand for art grew, new processes were invented to supply a more exacting criticism, and these new forms of art created increased demand, up to this day. Ever since the Dark Ages, the story of the print is parallel with the story of democracy, and the evolution of the graphic arts is the evolution of the thought of the people, through various modes, but always from the definite, the concrete to the abstract idea; from the statement of illustration to the suggestion of art.

Speaking of democracy, the thought occurs of those ancient republics of Greece and Rome—did they have prints to speak for the people? Apparently not. But they had pottery, the terra cotta and bronze statues in duplicate, and Saint Paul speaks of the large trade in little silver souvenirs of Diana, of Ephesus, evidently a prototype of religious prints of the Middle Ages, and a true democratic form of art. In ancient Egypt the immense number of scarabs found, and small images of the strange divinities of the Nile valley, seem to show that even in that forgotten era there was a supply to meet the demands, however crude, of the populace.

It may seem a large order to say that the greatest invention in history is the print, the picture in duplicate, but so it is; and this has often been noted, as, for example, by our own Ben Franklin. For the invention of the printing press did not come from the open sky, but was evolved from the old wood-cut print. And all that printing implies, good and bad, periodicals, illustrations and calendars, books without end in sight, and, indeed, the very sciences whose growth is so largely due to the spreading of information by the printed word; all this first originated in the attempt of some humble artist to sell his wares in duplicate, much as the etchers try to do today.

April Luck.

A lucky month for all young people is April. If a girl is being courted for the first time in April, her love affair will end happily. The 15th of the month is particularly lucky for lovers' meetings. Turn a silver coin in your purse before going to the meeting, have something green about you, and be sure not to turn back for anything when you have left the house, and good luck will go with you.

MISS BURMAN'S PIANO

PUPILS GIVE RECITAL

The piano recital by the pupils of Miss Nettie Burman at her studio, 21 Janet street, Thursday evening was well attended by parents and friends who were much pleased with the progress made during the past year.

The youngest as well as the older members showed that interest, practice and a real desire to do the work well accomplishes much. "Butterflies" played by Marjorie Fowler who commenced her study the past year at the age of seven years, and "Doll's Dream" by Louise Harder who began her lessons in January were notable features in the opening program. Each number by the other young pupils called for certain style and expression peculiar to it. The junior part was delightfully closed with a recitation "Three Little Chestnuts" by Thelma Hicks who has elocution added to her talents.

Among the older members the tenderness of "Berceuse" from Jocelyn was well expressed by Gertrude Walker; the brilliancy of "Tarentella" by Janet Phillips, the varied style of "Third Meditation" by Eleanor Phinney; the dash and clean cut "Pas des Amphores" by Marguerite Radatz; the harmony of the hymn and runs in "The Last Hope" by Kathleen Meeker; the full sonorous, powerful tones of the "Prelude" by Mildred LeRoy, the daintiness of the "Butterfly" and the beauty and brilliancy of the runs in the "Impromptu" by Helen Carpenter, each and all called forth very favorable comments.

The final number Concert Etude F Sharp Minor by Mac Dowell was rendered by Miss Marion Messenger, a pupil of 1922, now studying in the New England Conservatory of Music. It was a great pleasure to all to hear her vigorous, brilliant playing, and an inspiration to the class.

Hearty applause called for an encore Chopin Nocturne in E Major played equally well and with beautiful tone coloring.

This ended the last pupils' recital at 21 Janet street, as the Misses Burman have sold their residence and will make their future home on John street, West Hurley. Miss Nettie Burman retains her class, and will have a studio in Kingston, beginning in September. The program was as follows:

Lady Phyllis King

This is the latest photograph of Lady Phyllis King, daughter of Earl Lovelace, one of the few eligibles left in England who is considered, according to custom, to be a fitting mate for the Prince of Wales. And, unlike many of her predecessors for the honor, Lady Phyllis seems to be taken seriously by the Prince, who is showing her marked attention.

STRIKE HEARING IN SCHENECTADY

President of N. Y. Central Admits His Company Owns Trolley Stock But He Doesn't Know Much About Strike.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 29.—Means of settling the strike of the Schenectady Street Railway employees were sought today at a hearing of the state industrial commission when A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central railroad, was examined by Bernard L. Shientag, state industrial commissioner.

Smith admitted under examination that the New York Central owned fifty per cent of the stock of the street railway company. He denies, however, that he was familiar with the clauses of the contract between the Schenectady line and its workers.

"We are all a little bit behind in the investigation of the strike," Smith declared. "I haven't much in mind about it. I don't know whether the strike was justified or not."

Smith said he appeared in the hearing because "his people had money invested in the Schenectady line."

The strike has been in progress since May 16.

GET $15,000 WORTH OF "DOPE," ARREST SEVENTEEN

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Buffalo, June 29.—Government narcotic agents, working under cover here for the last six weeks, this morning made one of the city's biggest dope raids, seizing about $15,000 worth of dope and arresting 17 persons. Joseph M. Bransky, chief of narcotic agents for the state came to Buffalo from New York to supervise the details in person. Among the narcotic agents were three women, who helped secure evidence against seven women arrested for peddling and possessing drugs.

15 ARRESTED AS CAR STONERS IN SCHENECTADY

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Schenectady, June 29.—Fifteen persons have been arrested here in the last six hours charged with stoning trolley cars. Most of the disturbances have taken place at night. Police say strike breaking motorists and conductors have been partly responsible for the trouble by taunting the crowds.

Nearly half the 450 trolley workers who struck two months ago when the company refused to recognize the union, have found employment in other lines.

SHIP LIQUOR STILL A PROBLEM

Government Hesitates To Put Haynes's Rules Into Effect For Fear Of Serious Controversies With Other Nations.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, June 29.—Anxious to avoid any unreasonable action in the ship liquor controversy which might lead to retaliation by Great Britain or other powers, the government still hesitated in altering its policy of enforcing the Volstead act within American territorial waters, although prohibition officials continued to insist that seizure of foreign liquor carrying ships should be ordered to stop violations.

Regulations providing for the libeling of foreign vessels and the arrest of the captains on charges of violating the national prohibition act have been prepared by Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes, but they cannot be promulgated or put into effect until they have the formal approval of Acting Secretary of the Treasury Gilbert. Thus far Secretary Gilbert has declined to approve the new regulations because he believed with state department officials, that drastic enforcement of the law was not necessary at this time and expected that illegal importation of liquor would be aided pending negotiations to iron the difficulties arising from the supreme court's bone dry decision.

They think the government should make it plain to Great Britain, France and other nations that the Volstead act must be enforced even at the risk of involving the government in complications with foreign powers.

Pending the receipt of official advice no comment was forthcoming at the state department, today on Lord Curzon's announcement that Great Britain would never consent to the extension of the three-mile limit.

It was stated in government circles, however, that the British have misinterpreted the intentions of the United States in believing that seizures of liquor have been made merely as a lever to force favorable action on the proposal of Secretary Hughes for a compromise. The Volstead act was pointed to as making it mandatory on the treasury department to proceed as at present in the enforcement of the law, regardless of the plans of the United States to facilitate its fight against rum smugglers.

Treasury department today ruled that foreign ships entering American ports will not be allowed to retain beer as part of their medicinal stocks. The department said beer as medicine is specifically prohibited by the Willis-Campbell amendment to Volstead law.

At the treasury department today high officials took the view that foreign ship lines will not continue the practice of bringing into American waters surplus supplies of liquor. They believed that foreign ships would not want to risk further losses by seizures now that the enforcement attitude of the United States is now clearly understood. It was officially declared that nothing has come to the attention of this government to indicate that foreign ship lines are conspiring to break down the prohibition laws, but on the contrary the suggestion has been made that the ships on which seizures have been made were started on their routes from Europe to New York and other ports with extra liquor supplies to test the prohibition law provision applying to foreign ships liquor.

If Great Britain approved the American suggestion for the extension of the three mile limit, the state department proposed to permit the entrance of beverage liquor under seal, but a flat turn down of the proposition advanced by this government will mean that the treasury department will have to proceed with the seizure of all non-medicinal liquor brought into the United States, until congress has an opportunity six months hence to amend the Volstead act.

Prohibition officials are exasperated because the seizure of liquor is not stopping foreign ships from bringing it into American ports.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 29.—The stock market opened firm today. Transactions represented mostly covering operations, resulting in advances from a fraction to over one point.

Baltimore and Ohio was strong, advancing 1 1/4 to 44 1/2. Northern Pacific yielded 1 1/4 to 67 1/2. New York Central rose 1/4 to 98, ex-dividend. Union Pacific rose one point to 120 1/2 and Atchafalpa 1/2 to 99. Oil stocks were steady. Royal Dutch rose 1/4 to 46 1/2. Standard Oil of California 1/2 to 50 1/2 and California Petroleum 1/2 to 21 1/2.

Stocks were highly irregular in the first two hours of trading. The market started off with a rush of buying both for long and short accounts. Towards the end of the second hour most of the gains made during the first hour were cancelled. Independent steel stocks were singled out as their main target for attack, but failed to bring about renewed unsettlement in the general list. Business in the second hour was slow. Railroad stocks were steadily accumulated at fractionally higher prices.

Pressure increased shortly after noon, especially in the railroad list. Liquidation of large blocks of high priced stocks caused breaks of from 3 to 4 points in Northern Pacific at 65 1/2, Great Northern preferred at 64 1/2 and Canadian Pacific at 146.

Alas for Fame!

Here are two good examples of English knowledge of America, taken from a small book of essays edited by Blackwell and Makower, published by the Oxford Press, and intended for use in English high schools and colleges:

"The literary societies of American colleges are often termed 'Phi Beta Kappa,' the initials of their Greek motto."

"Cape Cod—the name given to the whole peninsula—about 65 miles long—which ends in the promontory of the same name. It forms part of the state of Massachusetts, which justly claims to be the chief home of letters in the States."—Correspondent in the New York Evening Post.

Not Exactly Piety.

Young Albert was usually a source of much annoyance to his mother during the morning service. But this morning she was filled with pride at her young hopeful's attitude as she saw him sitting with clasped hands and bowed head throughout a particularly long prayer. When they were returning home mother expressed her appreciation of his pious manner of attendance, whereupon the lad's face lighted up as he chuckled:

"That I walked in and out of my hands exactly 230 times."

Much Bread Eaten.

If all the bread the average person eats in a year were baked in one loaf, it would take three strong men to lift it and a horse to pull it. The weight of the loaf would be 397 pounds.

TELEPHONE STRIKE STILL EFFECTIVE

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Boston, June 29.—The fourth day of the strike of New England Telephone Company operators opened today with the strikers and the company both claiming gains and predicting victories. In Boston and Worcester, where disturbances have occurred, extra details of police were on duty today. Days off to Worcester patrolmen have been suspended for the duration of the strike.

Eleven striking girl operators were arrested in Boston during a disturbance outside the Milk street office of the company. Miss Julia O'Connor, leader of the strikers, said today she would appeal to Police Commissioner Wilson because of the treatment received from the arresting officers. One girl, she said, has several black and blue marks received when arrested. All were scheduled to appear in court today, charged with inciting to riot. One is so young she will have to appear in juvenile court.

Rhode Island continued to be the most seriously affected by the strike. Worcester, Springfield and Brockton were among the Massachusetts cities where telephone communication is most seriously handicapped.

BEILIAN CUSTOMS MEN OFFEND BRITISH GENERAL

Keep Him Standing Outdoors In His Pajamas.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, June 29.—A sensational story that General Sir Alexander Godley, commander-in-chief of the British army of occupation on the Rhine, was held up at Aix-La-Chapelle by Belgian customs officials and compelled to remain standing on the railway station platform in his night clothing for an hour while his baggage was searched, was printed by the Daily Chronicle today.

War office officials said they had no information regarding the "Godley incident."

General Godley, according to the Daily Chronicle account left Cologne for London on Sunday. When his private railway reached Aix-La-Chapelle it was boarded by Belgian customs officials who ordered the British officer to the station platform, not giving him time to dress. His personal papers were scrutinized as his baggage was searched.

The Daily Chronicle declared the British government should demand an apology from Belgium for this "intolerable outrage."

ARMY AIRMEN FORCED DOWN

Crankshaft Falls After They Have Flown 24 Hours and Made New Speed Records.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
San Diego, Cal., June 29.—Captain Lowell H. Smith and Lieutenant John B. Richter narrowly escaped death today when in a forced landing their big De Havilland "air Marathas" plane turned completely over at Rockwell field. The machine was badly damaged but the two intrepid aviators who had been in the air for almost 24 hours, crawled out virtually uninjured.

A damaged crankshaft caused the forced landing and abandonment of the attempt to fly 100 hours without pause. The landing was made just six minutes short of 24 hours after the plane had taken off yesterday in its record-breaking attempt.

The plane came down with honors, however, as the 2,500 kilometer, 3,000 and 3,500 kilometer records are believed to have been broken for speed and possibly others. Those records were held by Lieutenants Mac Ready and Kelly, having been hung up at Dayton, Ohio, in the T-2.

JOHNSON DEFEATS VINCENT RICHARDS

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Wimbledon, June 29.—William M. Johnston, California tennis wizard, fought his way to a commanding position for the singles championship of the world when he eliminated Vincent Richards, Yonkers, N. Y., youthful phenomenon, in the fourth round of the Wimbledon tournament today.

The score was 6-4, 6-3, 7-5.

Johnston now goes into the round before the semi-finals and takes a place with the eight survivors in the men's singles championship.

The Californian, by his victory today, maintained his record for defeating Richards every time he has met him.

The Yonkers youngster was unable to come with Johnston's smashing, forehead drives and uncanny placements.

Richards was forced to the baseline and was continually on the defensive play in the second which he lost 6-3.

His three victories in this set were all on service. The Californian's powerful drives amazed the galleries. Three times in the second set he went to the net and killed terrific drives by his youthful opponent.

For the first time in the tournament Richards was unable to hold his position at the net.

Danced Themselves Into Frézy.

There is nothing new about the endurance dance. In 1734, when peasant and noble for leagues about gathered at the festival of St. John, at Aix-la-Chapelle, a fellow in motley danced over the cobbles. Presently he was joined by a beggar, so that the two graced companionably and leaped and pranked. Then a stout burgher hurried his bulk into the revel. A conflagration of dancing, without apparent reason, was kindled, and before the sun declined the streets were thronged with prancing thousands. Indeed, so runs the chronicle, they "commenced dancing in a wild and frantic manner, many losing entire control over themselves, and continuing to dance until dropping down from fatigue, and some, in a moment of frenzy, dashing out their brains against walls."

IMMIGRANT RUSH ON FROM EUROPE

18,000 Aliens Racing Towards Ellis Island, Where Facilities Will Be Overtaxed.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 29.—Twenty-three steamships from European ports, with 18,000 aliens on board, were racing towards New York today to enable the immigrants to enter the United States under the new immigration quota for the fiscal year which goes into effect Sunday.

It is feared the congestion at Ellis Island will be the worst in its history. Immigration Commissioner Tod ordered every attaché at his post Sunday morning to facilitate examination of aliens and to expedite the work of entry to the greatest possible degree.

Officials will come from Washington to assist the Ellis Island authorities.

Seventeen liners are due Sunday and six more on Monday.

CHILD CLINIC TO BE AT CITY HALL

The free clinic for crippled children which has been arranged by the Rotary Club for July 11 and 12 will be held at the city hall, where other clinics for children have been held for many months. The clinic will be held in the rooms of the board of health and the large room used by the police commissioners for their meetings, which are admirably adapted for clinical purposes.

The clinic will be attended by experts from the state board of health and will be for all crippled children, no matter how their condition has been brought about, and it is intended to coordinate the results of the clinic with the state's bureau for vocational training for cripples, whereby a trade is taught and the pupil is supported by the state while learning to become self supporting.

The clinics heretofore held for victims of infantile paralysis have been so successful that the Rotary Club was led to arrange for the free clinic for all crippled children of the county, including those who became crippled through infantile paralysis.

Woman Tried to Convert Sultan.

Mary Fisher was an enthusiastic English Quakeress of the Seventeenth century, who traveled to Constantinople with the intention of converting the sultan. After many difficulties and hardships she finally reached her goal and obtained an audience with Mehmet IV. He was so surprised at her courage and the manner in which she addressed him that he regarded her as mentally deranged and ordered her to be carried back to her own country in the first vessel that sailed. On her return she was received in triumph by the Quakers, and married one of the principal members of that sect.

An Early Florentine Master.

Sandro Botticelli was an Italian painter, born in 1447. He died in 1510. He was one of the greatest representatives of the Florentine school during the early Renaissance. Botticelli excelled in painting Madonnas, and important examples of these may be seen in a private collection in Boston, in the Uffizi palace, Florence, and in the Berlin museum. The masterpiece of his early career is a panel representing the "Adoration of the Magi." His most celebrated mythological picture, "Spring," or "The Realm of Venus," hangs in the Academy of Fine Arts, Florence.

Only the Corpses Unshocked.

A short time ago I attended a bunco party and won the booty prize. As the party was given by a club of young high school girls, we all started home together. The prize was a tiny rooster on a stand, and when pressed, or squeezed, it crowed most naturally. As we were nearing home we saw a corpse on the door of one of our neighbors' houses, so went in and, after looking at the corpse, we knelt down to pray for it. In kneeling, I squeezed against a chair and, to my horror and surprise, Mr. Rooster crowed lustily. Exchange.

The Hush of Wonder.

The atmosphere of Poetry is the hush of wonder; and that is why there can be no humorous poetry. Verse, felicitously turned, beautifully expressed. Yes! But not humor and poetry at the same instant! You may often have a set of verses in which Pierrot and Columbine sit in and out. You feel the flashes of poetry reaching into you. Suddenly you laugh. Why, it is Harlequin again, and there is the Clown. But the hush of wonder is gone.—Oliver C. de Ellis.

Easy Dusting.

Mrs. Florin had a new maid, and one morning as she entered the library she was somewhat surprised to find the girl seated in one of the chairs with her hands folded. "What!" cried the mistress. "Here you are sitting down! Why, you were sent in here to dust the room!" "Yes, ma'am," was the girl's reply. "But I've lost the duster, and so I am sitting on each of the chairs in turn."—Harper's Magazine.

Decay of Glass.

It is probable that but few persons who admire the iridescence of ancient glassware know that the prismatic displays are a result of the decay of the glass. When disintegration sets in the substance of the glass splits into exceedingly thin laminae, which, as the sunlight traverses them, give rise to a splendid play of colors. As in the instance of the leaves of a forest, these delicate laminae signalize their approaching solution by becoming more beautiful.

At Her Very Doorstep

By CORONA REMINGTON
(© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The girl read the short letter over and over: "You have been appointed teacher of the third grade in the Mary school at Dalton, Texas. The school opens September 20."

Corinne Macdonald let the piece of paper fall from her hands and gave herself up to morbid reflections. Three months ago she had wanted to go to a new country and to new scenes and had written to a teachers' agency asking them to procure her a position. Now it had come, and far enough away, goodness knows, nearly two thousand miles; but did she want it any more? Then she was lonely and restless and longed for anything for a change. To get away, to see new faces, to be among strangers, what a blessed relief it would be! And then, too, perhaps, she might meet the man. Such things had happened before now and to hundreds and hundreds of other girls. Why not to her? But all that had happened three months ago. Since then a new thing had come into her life and the new thing was—John Diddson, the manager of the town's big department store.

He had not been too attentive, yet not too indifferent, either, and he talked well and was good-looking and liked nice girls, really liked them. He'd long ago outgrown the rump-flapper style and seemed to get real pleasure out of his visits to Corinne. At least he produced that impression. He seemed to like her very much, in fact, although she was judging more by his actions than by anything he had said. If she stayed in the field, reflected Corinne, he must some day fall in love with her. Who knows?

But, after all, she would only be gone nine months; that wasn't long; on the other hand, absence does not make the heart grow fonder, especially when there are forty-eyen doings, angling females fluttering around you. When she got back he might be gone. That is as far as she was concerned. Yet she would not hang around waiting for him to propose to her; her pride simply would not permit it. She would go on with her work as she had planned. It would be hard, because it practically meant giving him up, but she had decided in the spring that she wanted to go away and now that the opportunity had come she would go regardless.

She jumped up and went over to her little desk. If she did not accept the position immediately she would lose her nerve and back out, then she would prove herself a weakling.

As soon as she had written the letter, she ran down to a mailbox and slipped it in. On the way back she met John Diddson and inwardly thanked heaven that she had not met him on the way to the box. The die was cast; he could not hurt her now.

"Let me walk home with you," he asked, falling into step at her side.

"I've just mailed a letter accepting a position as third-grade teacher in a school in Texas," she told him, trying to keep her voice steady.

"What for?" he asked, stopping in the middle of the street and staring at his companion.

"I—I just wanted to go," Corinne's eyes fell.

"That's a very poor answer. Why did you want to go?"

"I—I don't know. I just wanted to, that's all," she was getting a bit uneasy.

"Huh, we'll have to thrash it out. May I come over this evening?"

"Yes. I'd like to talk to you about it. It's been on my mind ever since I sent in my application three months ago."

"Well, don't get your heart too set on going."

"All right, bossy man," she laughed. "But don't you dare talk to me in that cave-man fashion."

"Corinne, you mustn't be flippant when I'm so serious. I can't let you go to Texas."

"I'm not in a position to marry you now, so that's why I haven't proposed sooner, but if you'll only wait a few more months, or a year at most! Please, dear, I've dreamed about you and thought about you so long you've become part of my life. I can't imagine what life would be like without you."

"You wanted to be pretty happy for a good many years before you ever knew of my existence," she remarked, trying to hold on to her whirling thoughts. "Now what are you going to do with that argument?"

"Why, that's easily answered. I guess my mother was pretty happy before I came, but she'd hate like everything to lose me now. The same might be said of your own mother and all the other mothers on earth."

"Men are so painfully logical. I never would have thought of making an answer like that, and the worst is I can't think of anything to say in reply. I'm afraid I lose and you win. Oh, oh, dear, you mustn't try to hold my hand out here. There's old Miss Fanny down the street now. I can just hear her running around telling everybody and then coming over and lecturing me about being such an ill-mannered little thing, as she'll put it. I'll be the laughing-stock of the whole block." She tried to wriggle away from him.

"Hang the neighbors. Don't you see you're torturing me?"

"I—I don't know what to say. I'll have to think it over. It's such a mistake to take. Oh, I'm so glad I did my duty."

"What duty?" he asked, bewildered. "You don't act like yourself today, Corinne. You must be very tired."

"No, not tired. Just happy and upset, and everything. J. John, you must not kiss me here. It's not too dark to see and I can just feel that old Miss Fanny looking at us."

"What do I care for all the old Miss Fannys on earth? You're mine, now. Mine, my own beloved girl. I can hardly believe that some day we'll be married and you'll be my wife."

"Why, I haven't said so."

"You don't have to—I know it."

"Of all the nerve! If I didn't love you I'd turn you down for that!"

"If you didn't I'd want you to turn me down, so I'm safe anyway," he laughed, kissing her again.

MAN DEVELOPED BRONCHO

Brought Out Needed Qualities, but Also Cultivated Vicious Qualities in the Animal.

The broncho is a "rat of a horse," with ewe neck, a hammer head, a short hip and an easy, loping gait. He is supposed to have descended chiefly from Spanish horses brought to this country in the Seventeenth century. Privations and cold have reduced him in size, stripped him of all purely ornamental parts and qualities and developed his capacity for endurance.

Bronchos are commonly intelligent, but they are also apt to be vicious. In fact, the breaking which they undergo, and which has been practiced upon many generations of their ancestors, could hardly fail to leave them vicious. The Wild West shows have made the buck-jumping of a broncho familiar to people almost everywhere.

Nor is it easy to make them go in harness. There was once hitched to a light roadster belonging to a westerner a pony that had been ridden for some years. Many precautions were taken in the way of straps and ropes, so that kicking was rendered impossible. Finally, when all was ready, the owner mounted the cart and drove out of his yard.

A neighbor watched him as far down the road as he could see, and no old horse could have gone more steadily or better than this broncho. But, as it soon appeared, he was only biding for his opportunity. When he came to a bridge over a river, which he had often crossed, the pony, without the least warning, jumped the rail, taking man and cart along with him, and dropped the whole thing in the flood.

It was in the spring, and ice was running, but with some difficulty the horse, as well as the man, was rescued—and this was his last appearance in harness.

FINNISH BATH IS STRENUOUS

Might Be Enjoyed as a Novelty, but First Experience Would Satisfy Most Americans.

At Hammett we enjoyed the unusual experience of a Finnish bath. One or two of the houses in town are specially constructed for this purpose.

Built into the wall in the bathroom is a stove made of large stones, which forms a home-made furnace. The fire in the stove heats the stones very hot, and when water is thrown upon them the room is soon filled with steam.

As the bath progresses and the bathers, three or four being taken care of by one attendant, become warmed up, more and more water is thrown upon the hot stones.

A series of shelves in one end of the room enables the bather to increase the degree of heat by climbing up nearer and nearer the ceiling, until on the top shelf he may suffocate if he raises his head too high. Next he is scoured and scrubbed down with vegetable sponges and pounded with bundles of switches, which are wielded with no gentle hand, until he finally is ready to leave the steam room.

Then, after several bucketsful of increasingly cold water have been thrown upon him, he is treated at last to a shower of ice cold water direct from the glacier back of the village.

It was almost a "Finish" bath. J. P. Ault in the National Geographic Magazine.

Seek Fortune in Diamonds.

The present whereabouts of the calabash (gourd) of diamonds, estimated to be worth $500,000, said to have been in the possession of that high and mighty chief, Magato, of the Northeast Transvaal, has been the subject of much speculation.

It was stated at the time that the real object of the commando sent by Paul Kruger in 1908 against M'fetu, the drunken son and successor of the unconquered Magato, was to secure these diamonds. These stones were the presents to their chief made by the Magatoes on their return from service in the Kimberley mines, where they had stolen them—an easy thing in the old pre-Rhodes days.

The calabash disappeared when M'fetu and his thirty-one wives escaped from the beleaguered Hofstadter on the Zambesi.

Indian Gems in South Africa? Finely polished and mounted rubies and other precious stones, occasionally found among old natives in Pondoland, South Africa, revive a story, 150 years old, of an East Indian, carrying troops and much loot from Indian palaces, being wrecked on the Pondoland coast. Some of the women were carried up country and lived and died as the wives of natives. There is an old Bona tradition that a vast collection of mounted gems has been seen in the possession of Pondoland chiefs.

Schools in Philippines. The Philippine Islands have a total of 8,174 schools, public and private, with an approximate enrollment of 1,100,000, according to the bureau of education and the superintendent of private schools. It is estimated that the Philippines have a population of 2,500,000 children of school age.

Public schools alone number 7,641 and attendance reached a total of 1,004,472 during the last year, while private schools number 532 and have an enrollment of 64,837.

Eighty-five per cent of the private schools in the Philippines are religious institutions, and only 15 per cent secular. Seventy-seven per cent of the religious private schools are Catholic, while the remaining 8 per cent are Protestant.

The public school system, in which English is taught, includes 24,573 teachers, 341 of whom are Americans.

Arab Legend Concerning Cata.

According to an Arab legend, there was no such creature as a cat on this planet until Noah had marched all the animals into the ark. Then a plague of mice occurred, and Noah's family feared they would be eaten out of ark and home. But Noah prayed to Allah, and Allah caused the lion to sneeze a cat from its nostrils. And the mice immediately ceased troubling.

DON'T WAIT FOR BREAKDOWN CANDLES ALWAYS IN DEMAND

Writer Gives Reasons Why It Pays to Have Regular Times for Physical Examinations. For Excellent Reason That They Are Unfailing Emergency Light When Fuses Blow Out.

Most people have had the experience of going to a doctor for an examination at some time in their lives, some have had to go many times. Usually they have gone because there was something wrong with them, pain, fever, a cough, a rash or what not, but anyway, something for the doctor to study, give a name to and prescribe for. But imagine the factory manager who waits for the machinery in his plant to break down before he gives thought to having it overhauled—how long would he keep his job? Is his machinery more important or more liable to accidents than that of your body? Don't you think it would pay to have it overhauled before the breakdown comes and to see if the machinery is really being run efficiently?

In Hygiene, Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health in Columbia university, gives reasons enough to convince the most skeptical that health examinations pay, not only in increased health but also in dollars and cents.

"It has grown to be a custom for people who employ men and women in large numbers in shops and factories to have each new employee examined to see if he or she is in sound health."

And again: "Many of the unions are requiring an annual health examination of their members, because they have found this the best way to prevent the illnesses which cost their sick benefit funds so much." If these people who are in big business find it worth while and economical there is probably something in it.

STILL AFTER BOLL-WEEVIL

Department of Agriculture Experts Looking Into Another Scheme for Pest's Extirmination.

An attempt to attack the conquering cotton boll-weevil by more subtle means than have hitherto been employed is about to be started by the Department of Agriculture. Such crude methods as gassing and poisoning having been ineffective, the insect is going to be lured to his doom through his sense of smell. At least such is the hope of the department experts.

A research is about to be begun to find out if there be any particular odor or emanation from the cotton plant which attracts the weevil. If such is found, it will be studied until its action are isolated. It is hoped these may then be made synthetically and used to lure the pest of the cotton fields from the cotton to poison baits or else to cause him to raise a family before the cotton is developed enough to furnish them with proper means of support.—By Science Service.

Isaiah Was No Scap Hunter. Isaiah Walton, the father of fishing, never waited for his portrait with half a hundred dead fishes tied to his body. ## GIL DOBIE VISITING ZUPPKE OF ILLINOIS

Famous Coaches Win Exchange Views on Football Game.

There are no more famous and successful football coaches in the United States than Gil Dobie of Cornell and Bob Zuppke of Illinois, and they are going to have the time of their lives this summer.

Dobie is to spend six weeks teaching football in the Illinois summer course in athletic coaching, which opened June 18. That means that he and "Zup" will spend a lot of time exchanging views with each other.

And it will not be surprising if Cornell strategies show a trace of Illinois influence and if Illinois plays have a little Cornell in them.

It's a novel thing to bring two coaches of such prominence together. But the Illinois idea is to give the students—most of them coaches with experience—a broad course. They may take either course, or both, as they desire. Most of the men who have already enrolled write that they want to take both courses.

Both Dobie and Zuppke are real enthusiasts. They like to talk football. It is their meat and drink. That means that there will be many interesting discussions this summer.

Athletic coaches of the new day spend the summer seeking to widen their knowledge. This is demonstrated by the growth in attendance of the Illinois summer course, which was established in 1914 and was the first to emphasize the coaching of competitive sports. Nearly all the students are men who have experience as coaches and in athletics. For the high school graduate who wants to become a coach there is a four-year course in athletic coaching and physical education which leads to an academic degree.

Football with the Dobie-Zuppke combination is the high spot of the summer course, but most other subjects are listed, with the following staff of instruction: George A. Huff, director; Gilmour Dobie, football; Robert C. Zuppke, football; Carl L. Lundgren, baseball; Harry L. Gill, track and field athletics; J. Craig Ruby, basketball; George L. Stafford, medical gymnastics and physical diagnosis; Ernest F. Bear, football, basketball and organization; Burton A. Ingwersen, football and basketball; Seward C. Staley, calisthenics and mass athletics; David M. Bullock, training and massage; Carlos J. Wagner, gymnastics; W. Sterry Brown, swimming; Paul Prehn, boxing and wrestling.

None of them had sense enough to submerge, and declined all assistance from the keepers. They all knew something was wrong, but insisted in remaining on deck, as it were. In Spite of Newton's Law. This story is told of an Irish lawyer named Keller who was famous for his native wit but who, partly from indolence and partly from a frivolous disposition, did not succeed particularly well in his profession. Another lawyer named Mayne, as sober and ponderous as Keller was light-minded and clever, was made a judge, much to Keller's vexation. On one occasion the impetuous lawyer was sitting in the courtroom where Judge Mayne was solemnly presiding. Suddenly he plucked a brother attorney by the sleeve. "Look at that," he whispered. "There's Mayne risen by his gravity, and here I am sunk by my levity. What would Sir Isaac Newton make of that, I wonder?"—Youth's Companion.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE REGATTA

Among the noticeable things at the regatta at Poughkeepsie on Thursday was the lack of large yachts.

More and more people are coming up in automobiles and watching the classic from the Highland shore.

The Navy was a strong favorite in Poughkeepsie before the races and the Navy men were very confident in their predictions that the other crews wouldn't have a look in.

Nearly everyone seemed to rule Washington out as contenders due to the fact that it was thought that Walling, the stroke, would be out on account of an attack of blood poisoning.

Such people did not reckon with the unconquerable courage of this six footer who, with sharp pains shooting up and down his leg at every pull of the oar, came to the fore and now is conceded to be one of the greatest strokes the sport has ever known.

Walling was the only one of the Washington crew to succumb after the race but after the little coxswain, Donald J. Grant, had thrown quantities of water into his face he came back in time to lead the river ring with cheers for the victors.

It was a remarkable fact that boats which had been cheering their hardest for other crews to win, after the race with just as much vim and pep paid a remarkable tribute to the hard fighting westerners.

After the crews had come under the bridge with Washington in the lead the six footers were never headed.

What a race it was during the last quarter of a mile! The Navy was determined to win for the third time in succession and to do so she increased her pace to 42 strokes per minute. A superhuman pace.

Washington was equal to it however and bending their backs as a machine the eight men increased their stroke to 35 and went over the line a length and a half ahead of the crew from Annapolis.

The Navy, which had received the shirts of Washington last year, now handed over their shirts to the men who, for the first time in 26 years, had taken the laurels of the Hudson back to the Pacific.

The varsity race was a thriller but the freshmen race was more so, even though not as much was at stake. Cornell led the race from the bridge down to the finish but, my, how close Washington got to them as both boats crossed the line. Washington, every one of whose freshmen crew was over six feet, fought like tigers to annex this race. However, Cornell, with remarkable form was not to be denied, and like a well oiled and perfect machine came over the line victors by no more than three feet.

Cornell deserved to win this race but Washington crowned herself with glory by the fight which she made.

Syracuse, as advance dopsters had predicted, won the junior varsity race. Cornell was a length behind in this race and fought hard to win but she did not have the form that the Orange did.

The honors were evenly divided and Washington goes back to the Pacific coast as one of the most popular crews that ever raced on the Hudson.

Joe Purcell, from this city, rowed No. 7 in the Cornell junior varsity crew.

The Cornell varsity could not stand up under the strain after the two and one half mile mark had been passed.

Poughkeepsie seems to be assured of the regatta for next year also. A large number of people from this city witnessed the races which rivalled any which have been held thus far as far as thrills were concerned.
